WE ARE ALL EVANGELIZERS

(and whatever else is on Deacon Eric’s mind)

What Does “Good” Mean?

It seems like a simple question, doesn’t it? Even a child can tell us that good means “not bad.” Of course, we know that the word “good” is a relative term that means one thing to one person and something else to someone else. For example, I can say that we elected a good president this week -- and at least half of the voters in this country would agree. The other half is bemoaning the fact that the world is coming to an end, or at least democracy is. (Keep in mind this column is being written on Halloween, so if the world ends on Election Tuesday, this column will have no meaning and we will all have found out whether each of us has met God’s definition of “good.”)

I most certainly don’t want to go down a political rabbit hole, but I do think it’s important for all of us to make sure that we have a solid understanding of what constitutes “good” for us at the highest level. Let’s turn to my old buddy G. K. Chesterton for a kick-starter quote: “The more we are certain what good is, the more we shall see good in everything.” If what is good is a moving target for us, then we may never really know good.

We read the gospel account of the rich young man a couple weeks ago. The young man knelt before Jesus and asked what it would take to get to heaven and Jesus rattled off a series of commandments. The young man excitedly answered that he had been following them his whole life. It is good for all of us to follow the commandments, but like the young man in the parable there’s always something more Jesus wants us to do. In the parable Jesus asked the man to sell all his belongings and follow him. For us, our “more” may be something like volunteering to help at the community Thanksgiving dinner or postponing a major “fun” purchase and instead support the Saints and Scholars drive to enhance religious education. The important action as defined by Chesterton is to truly define “good,” which will us to see good in everything and everybody.

Assuming we are not all twisted up trying to define what good means for each of us, recall that in that same parable of the young rich man, he addresses Jesus as “Good teacher.” To which Jesus replies: “Why do you call me good? No one is good but God alone.” If only God is good and we know he is perfect, how can we realistically expect to be good, because we can never be perfect?

We can’t be perfect, but we can strive to be. And along the way, we are likely to figure out what good means for us, and thus more readily see the good in others. When we better see the good in others, we better understand the good and our actions will better reflect the ultimate good -- perfection in the Lord.

When we have space in our bulletin, we're excited to share our "Throwback Thursday" posts from Facebook. We understand that not everyone has a Facebook account, and we don't want you to miss out on the joy and nostalgia these memories bring.

As we continue our 100 year celebration, we are reminded of past Halloweens at St. Joseph School. Today's pictures include several fun scenes from various years including the 1986 downtown Halloween parade. Soar on, Comets!
